For some young adults with a mental health diagnosis, efforts to achieve their goals for the future can seem like a series of locked doors and brick walls. The TransitionZ program strives to assist young adults in finding the keys to unlock these doors and to develop a blueprint for a successful future.

Our residents are paired with a Life Coach who tailors services to meet their needs and connects young people to community resources. Life Coaches use a strength-based perspective and youth-driven model for improving the outcomes who are homeless, parenting, leaving juvenile justice, mental health systems, aging out of foster care and/or LGBTQ,

Transition to Independence Model

- Helps young people create their own futures
- Enhances the educational, vocational, housing and community life domains of young people

We Are Here to Help

Our Life Coaches use the Transition to Independence Model to focus on goals related to:

- Employment and Career
- Educational opportunities
- Personal well-being
- Community Life-Functioning
- Connection to community resources
